Elberfeld a Star.

Elberfeld is a great ball player, but not in New York. Some people say he never has been handled right, but that's neither here nor there.

The question then arises. Who will play at short if Elberfeld goes? Niles would fit in there as well as at second. That would leave Conroy at third, where League, according to all-dope, there looms Richmond, accompanied by a band, and he belongs, and Griff could well afford up a third contender. to part with Stahl if Lajoie is willing to give one of his infielders.

On this night it is said that Freddy was eclipsing all previous oratorical ef-fusions, and seeing that everbody present was of Massachusetts stock, Freddy builded his speech around celebrated Bay State beroes. When he came to Daniel Webster he became a little bit mixed and began to extol that noted statesman on account of his having brought out the dictionary. Just when Freddy made this raw statement Hobe Ferris, who knew better, leaned over hurriedly, and catching Freddy by the coat, he whispered, but in so hoarse a voice that every one near by clearly heard him say:

'It wasn't Daniel Webster who wrote the dictionary, Parent; it was Noah! In answer to this. Freddy turned flerce on Ferris and cried out in a voice audible to every one in the hall: "Who? Noah wrote the dictionary" Why, you ninny, it was Noah who built
